

White: Jude Tallichet

by CORINNA KIRSCH on JANUARY 8, 2014 · 1 COMMENT COLOR WHEEL

Jude Tallichet, "Dropped Undies," 2012.

Color Wheel is a series in which we identify a trending color in art, and post a daily image that illustrates its popularity. This week's color is white.

Why what a strange bundle of underwear. It looks like it's been thrown to the ground, and of all things, in the shape of an infinity symbol. Our eyes deceive us however because boom, this is a pair of sculpted undies. It's hard to the touch, but not because it's been left out by the dumpster.

Anyway, I came across this rarity while looking at Flux Factory's 2014 benefit website because I'm going, and I was curious about what'll be on view next week. I'm pretty sure someone will scoop up Jude Tallichet's unwitting pair of undies; it'd be a great conversation piece or at the very least, I bet you could pull a modest prank with those undies/not-undies.